Annual Residents Survey 2012 – how is Council performing?

75% of residents surveyed said they are satisfied with how Council spends rates on the services and facilities it provides.

Since 1996, Council has regularly commissioned a survey of Tasman residents to get their views on a range of the services it delivers. For the last four years these surveys have been done every year.

A total of 400 residents over 18 years of age are surveyed, with interviews conducted spread across the five wards and across various age brackets to ensure a representative sample.

The results from the survey cover satisfaction levels with Council services and compares these against results for similar size local authorities around New Zealand to get a feel for how the Council is performing. The results are used to gauge the opinions of the District as a whole and are also broken down across the wards.

Commenting on the survey findings Mayor Richard Kempthorne said, "I always look forward to receiving the results of the Council's annual survey – it's vitally important that we understand where residents feel Council is performing well, and where it needs to improve. My focus is on the Council providing the core services to an acceptable level whilst keeping rates affordable; the direct feedback provided by the survey enables the Council to gauge how we are performing against this goal. Overall 36% of residents think Tasman is a better place to live today than it was three years ago, with only 6% saying it is worse. I take a lot of encouragement from this. Yes, there will always be issues that people feel could and should be improved, but if respondents feel the District is developing well then I am confident we are on the right track."

A summary of the 2012 survey's findings can be found on pages four and five. The full survey results can be viewed at www.tasman.govt.nz/link/resident-survey

The independent residents survey was conducted by the National Research Bureau for Council during May/June 2012.

Message from the Mayor

In recent days there has been media speculation about the Council's road delineation policy and the reasons for it.

The policy introduced in 2010 is focused on creating a consistent view of road marking throughout the Tasman District. Despite recent reports the policy is about creating clarity and enhancing safety. It provides guidance about roadmarking on the 1700kms of Council managed roads, not just rural roads.

Yes there have been some savings and they have been clearly reported; yes we are operating with a reduced roading budget as is nearly every local authority, however, it must be remembered this policy has been in since 2010 and is an ten year programme. In that time savings have been made which are being redirected back into the programme.

Within the policy, which covers all of Council managed roads, there is one section specifying the level of road markings on rural roads with less than 100 daily journeys, effectively the lower use roads in the District. The specifications are very clear regarding the need to identify hazards to ensure the safety of road users. It provides for standardisation of such markings and, in some cases, it says some markings on sections of these roads may not be necessary.

The result has been an increase of roadmarking on some of these roads, particularly around hazards, as well as the removal of some marking.

We have not, and never will, put a price on safety. If people are concerned about sections of specific roads they should call the Council.

The policy is open for all to see on our website.

Mayor Richard Kempthorne

Saxton velodrome – a community facility with huge potential

Racing cyclists of all ages and abilities will have a first-class venue in the new velodrome at Saxton's Field, but the $2 million facility is mainly community-focused, catering for school children and those new to cycling, says the trust behind the project.

The 333m outside track will be steeply banked at either end and made of either concrete or asphalt, depending on cost. A 300m inside circuit will offer a flat surface for recreational riders, and the arena in the middle includes a mock road layout for cycle safety training.

The velodrome has been allocated a total of $1.6 million in the Tasman District and Nelson City Council Long Term Plans, with the Saxton's Velodrome Trust now setting about raising the extra $400,000 needed to make the project possible. It will apply to charitable trusts and is actively seeking donations from the community and local businesses.

Trust chairman Rob Ford says the velodrome should be completed in 12-18 months. Schools have welcomed the project, with indications that they will include cycling in their sports programmes. Primary schools are keen to use the road safety arena.

The velodrome also complements the Councils' Get Moving campaign, encouraging people to walk and cycle more, he says.

The facility will be ideal for cycling "carnivals", which are growing in popularity and should draw competitors from throughout New Zealand. As the logistics of racing on public roads become more difficult, Rob sees the velodrome being the logical alternative.

"The velodrome will be an exciting new community facility," he says, and Tasman and Nelson is well-placed to cash in on its reputation as "The Heart of Cycling in New Zealand" with perhaps the highest muster of riders per capita in the country. The velodrome will also tie in with Tasman's Great Taste Trail, the regional network of cycleways and mountain bike tracks. For information on how you can get involved in fund-raising for the velodrome contact Rob Ford on Ph. 03 544 5470

Tasman District Council is inviting Contractors to apply or update their information for prequalification onto one or more of the eleven (11) Supplier Panels. Champion flyers winging in Godwits will start arriving in our estuaries in the next few weeks, exhausted from a 11,700km non-stop flight from Alaska, just to spend the summer with us.

A feat worth applauding, and once again the Motueka Arts Council is holding a Welcome to Godwits Celebration, which also serves to remind people of the importance of protecting our estuaries so they remain a sanctuary and place of sustenance for these magnificent travellers.

The Celebration is on Sunday 23 September 2012, 10.00 am to 1.00 pm, along the Motueka waterfront. Telescopes will be set up by the Nelson Ornithological Society on the old wharf (near the wreck of the Janie Seddon) so you can view the godwits feeding in the estuary. Information on the godwits' life cycle, and the other birds that reside in the estuary, will be set up in a marquee. Further along Motueka Quay, artists will be working on their paintings.

Children can learn about the godwits' diet, and can also have a go at making a sand or driftwood sculpture. This activity is open to all ages, and takes place at the beginning of the sandspit – entry off Staples Street, or across the pipeline from the walkway at the northern end of Motueka Quay.

Make it a family day out by biking or walking along the waterfront. Bring your binoculars. If the weather is really bad, the displays will be in the Motueka Recreation Centre, Old Wharf Road.

On Wednesday 26 September 2012, ornithologist Rob Schuckard will give a talk about the catching and banding of godwits, which he has been involved with since 2004. Learn about the movements of the godwits and other Arctic waders around the top of the South Island. The talk is at 7.30 pm at the SeniorNet rooms, 42 Pah Street, Motueka.

2012 Outstanding Community Service Awards

Half a dozen tireless volunteers were honoured by the Tasman District Council recently with Outstanding Community Service Awards.

At a ceremony held at the Tasman District Council Chambers on 17 August 2012, Mayor Richard Kempthorne said the awards were aimed at "recognising the host of people throughout our District who work quietly away without pay and with precious little recognition to make our communities better places to live. Our communities simply couldn't function without the work of volunteers like these," he said.

The Outstanding Community Service Awards are an annual event, and nominations close on 30 June each year. Nominees must be residents of the Tasman District and have been involved in a range of voluntary activities that have benefited their communities for 20 years or more.

2012 Award Recipients were:

Kaye Halkett – Richmond

Glenis Leppien – Motueka

Barry Cashman – Golden Bay

Valerie Scowen – Richmond

Ann Inglis – Motueka

George Duff – Golden Bay

We will feature further details about each of the 2012 Award Recipients in upcoming issues of Newsline.
